CHECK BEFORE YOU SHARE

1 Pause

If a post makes you scared or angry, that is the moment to pause. Fake posts are made to hurry you. Take a breath, and put the phone down for a minute. Nothing bad happens when you wait to share. Checking takes only a few minutes, and your family is safer for it.

2 Check who said it

The page name
Open the page itself, not only the post. Is the name a copy, with a small spelling change? When was the page made? What else does it post?

The date
Old posts come back again and again as "new". Check when it was first posted. A message with the place names changed is a copy.

The official account
Go to the real page yourself, by searching its name. A badge helps but is not proof. If the official page says nothing, be careful.

A real person
Ask someone you can talk to: your barangay health worker, a nurse or your doctor. A real person can tell you what is true for you.

3 Find another source

The DOH's official page, an independent fact-checker, or your health worker

Reply kindly

"Thank you for caring, Tita! I checked: this tea has no FDA registration. Let us ask Kuya Jun before Lola changes anything."

Kindness keeps your family listening. Thank the person first, then share the facts and a source.
